A SMILING Providence cast its radiance, over the solid north yesterday. A more deightful election day was never vouchsafed to the American republic. If the American people did not discharge their duty faithfully it was their own fault. The Creater invited them to their work with a radiant sunshine and a balmy air.

THE GRAND RESULT.

Although the result cannot be reduced to establish the fact beyond question that the republicans have carried the day triumphantly, and have elected their candidates for president and vice-president, and have, for this Paper, and also for the Collection of as we confidently believe and claim, succeeded in changing the character of the American congress from democratic to republican. This is ample for the occasion. It secures the future of this nation in the care of those who saved its life from the to the citizen everywhere some guarantee in the future that his rights will be respected and preserved, under circumstances where he will be permitted to vote and been made in this struggle. It does more it secures to the industries of the country both foster care and protection; it preserves a financial policy which secures confidence at home and abroad; it guarantees to the people the soundest and best currency known to the civilized world.

All this is assured to the country as a reward of republican fidelity and earnest THE school-book has beaten the pistol. work. Let the country rejoice. Let the glad, for they have won a glorious victory her internal troubles. She has her Irish of their adversaries ever known to American politics. The right has triumphed. England, though she can find time and noney to bestow upon American politics republicans everywhere be exceeding in the luterest of free trade, is not without in the midst of a contest the most calum- difficulties and her land-league perplexiulous, mendacious and criminal on the part ties. The campaign of intimidation inaugurated last spring begins to bear fruits not altogether palatable to the English taste. The government has been forced into a policy that does not consist with its rebuked. The nation is safe in the hands own real wishes, and the consequences are an earnest that southern methods and been anticipated. It was but recently that a farmer in Berkshire, England, refused to pay tithes in support of the legalized church, and when a portion of his property was seized to answer the demand, hi neighbors, under a fellow-feeling, combined parent results will be found on the first to follow his example and defend each with the purpose of defeating the new burials regulations, which permit the interment of dissenters in the parish church yards. The Pall Mall Gazette, in referring to these accumulating ills in the British kingdom, very pertinently inquires, "What was Mr. GLADSTONE'S Midlothian campaign last spring but a gigantic attempt to in timidate the government into pursuing a policy it did not want to pursue?" It is intimated, and not altogether without cause, that the had league, the Berkshire DEVLIN & CO., FINEST MADE GARMENTS dred to those of GLADSTONE and nothing worse. It is thought that BEACONSFIELD should have treated GLADSTONE just as he is trenting PARNELL and his colleagues now, and then the consistency of the English policy would be better vindicated. One thing is very certain-John Bull, ha a heap of trouble on his mind, while Brother JONATHAN will laugh complacently at his dilemma.

> The District's Interest in It. Although the people of this District were numble to take a direct part in the choice of a president of the United States, they were really more interested in the result than the citizens of any other part of the nuion. We mean not only that their sympathics were enlisted to a greater extent because this is the capital city of the nation, but that their material interests were to be affected by the result to a degree entirely unknown by the resi dents of other portions of the country.
